ABOUT:

41 Court Street offers 39,520 SF of in-place income and redevelopment potential within two connected building sections. The property combines an operating restaurant and entertainment tenant, vacant commercial space, existing apartment buildouts and a significant historic component, allowing a new owner to pursue improvements in phases.

The Court Street section includes Blazin Saddles Eatery & Saloon, which provides current commercial income, and the vacant former Galaxy Brewing space. Brewery and production infrastructure remain within the Galaxy portion, while apartment buildouts are located above both commercial spaces.

The larger historic section faces the Metro Center plaza and provides a separate entrance to several additional floors. Its defining feature is the former Wamsutta Tribe No. 37 lodge hall, where painted murals, a wraparound balcony, original woodwork and an ornamental ceiling dome remain. THE WAMSUTTA LODGE HALL

A RARE HISTORIC INTERIOR WITH SIGNIFICANT PRESERVATION POTENTIAL

Constructed between 1867 and 1869, the Bennett Block became home to Wamsutta Tribe No. 37 in 1909. The organization occupied the entire fourth floor, establishing the hall as a prominent gathering place for several affiliated groups.

Painted murals, balcony galleries, decorative woodwork, a raised platform and an ornamental ceiling dome continue to define the room. Although restoration is required, the hall retains the scale, craftsmanship and character of its original design.

Thoughtful preservation could support an event venue, performance space, gallery, cultural destination or distinctive amenity within a broader mixed-use redevelopment. A future owner may also preserve the hall primarily as one of the property's defining historic features.
