West Loop / Fulton Market

Once the beating heart of Chicago's meatpacking and wholesale food industries, the West Loop / Fulton Market area has transformed from a gritty industrial corridor into one of the city's most vibrant and valuable neighborhoods.

This area was once home to bustling warehouses and produce markets that fed the city and beyond. Today, echoes of that industrious past remain in the district's preserved brick-and-timber architecture and cobblestone streets—reimagined for modern innovation and creativity.

A culinary and retail destination

Synonymous with world-class dining, boutique retail, and experiential lifestyle brands, the neighborhood boasts a growing list of Michelin-starred restaurants, including Smyth and Roister, alongside trendsetting spots like Girl & the Goat, Rose Mary, and Momotaro. Upscale retail and curated local shops line Randolph and Fulton Streets, creating a walkable, energetic environment that attracts both locals and visitors alike.

Seamless transit connectivity

The West Loop–Fulton Market area is positioned for convenience with exceptional transit access. The Morgan CTA Station (Green and Pink Lines) is just steps away, while Clinton Blue Line and Ogilvie Transportation Center provide quick connections to the Loop, suburbs, and beyond. Multiple CTA bus routes, Divvy bike stations, and pedestrian-friendly streets make commuting and exploring effortless for tenants and visitors alike.

Home to industry leaders

Fulton Market has become a magnet for global headquarters and innovative companies. Major tenants include Google, McDonald's Global HQ, Dyson, Kimberly-Clark, Mondelez International, and WPP. This influx of top-tier employers has solidified the district as a premier destination for forward-thinking businesses seeking a vibrant, talent-rich environment.
