WHERE THE ACTION IS

Office to Residential Conversion

Calgary's downtown transformation continues to gain momentum through the City's office-to-residential conversion program, which now supports 21 projects expected to deliver 2,628 new homes. In 2025 alone, five completed downtown conversions added approximately 490 homes, while an additional 10 city-supported projects announced that year are projected to contribute a further 1,100 homes for roughly 2,000 residents.

Just steps from Chapter, the nearby Petro Fina Building conversion reflects this broader revitalization trend, introducing approximately 103 residential units through the adaptive reuse of roughly 130,000 SF of former office space. Together with continued public realm investments, including the new park across the street, these initiatives are helping drive increased population density, pedestrian activity, and renewed vibrancy throughout Calgary's downtown core.

University of Calgary Expansion

The University of Calgary's expansion, located across the street from Chapter, represents a transformative shift in Calgary's downtown core, converting underutilized office space into a vibrant post-secondary hub. Scheduled to open in Winter 2026, the project will introduce approximately 1,200 students into the area, activating the building and surrounding streets with consistent daily activity. Chapter is located immediately adjacent.

Through the conversion of roughly 180,000 SF across multiple floors, the development brings academic, research, and community-focused uses into the heart of downtown, contributing to increased foot traffic, economic activity, and long-term revitalization.
