When you combine a gorgeous historic building with a team of talented people, propelled by a vision of inspiration...

... Magic Happens!

Studio96 – formerly St. Stephen’s Anglican Church – was a historic landmark on 96 Street, also called „Church Street“. As the building was ordered to be demolished, Architects Ernst von Meijenfeldt and Eugene Silva had a flash of inspiration. They gathered resources and purchased the object, not knowing exactly what lays ahead. Soon they began renovations, applying their creative flair for design.

Founders of E3 Architecture, the partners moved their firm’s office into the church. Then, the event planner Diana Harrison entered the scene. Together, the trio transformed Studio96 into what it is today – a magical and inspiring venue in the heart of downtown Edmonton.

Studio96 is proud to contribute to the revitalization of the McCauley district. Rather than tearing down a historical structure, resources were joined with creative vision to bring more vibrancy to this culturally diverse neighborhood. Now the old and new walk hand in hand – with a historically structured building turned into a modern event space.

Formerly St. Stephen’s Anglican Church, a historic landmark on 96 Street was scheduled to be demolished when E3 Architecture acquired to preserve the property.

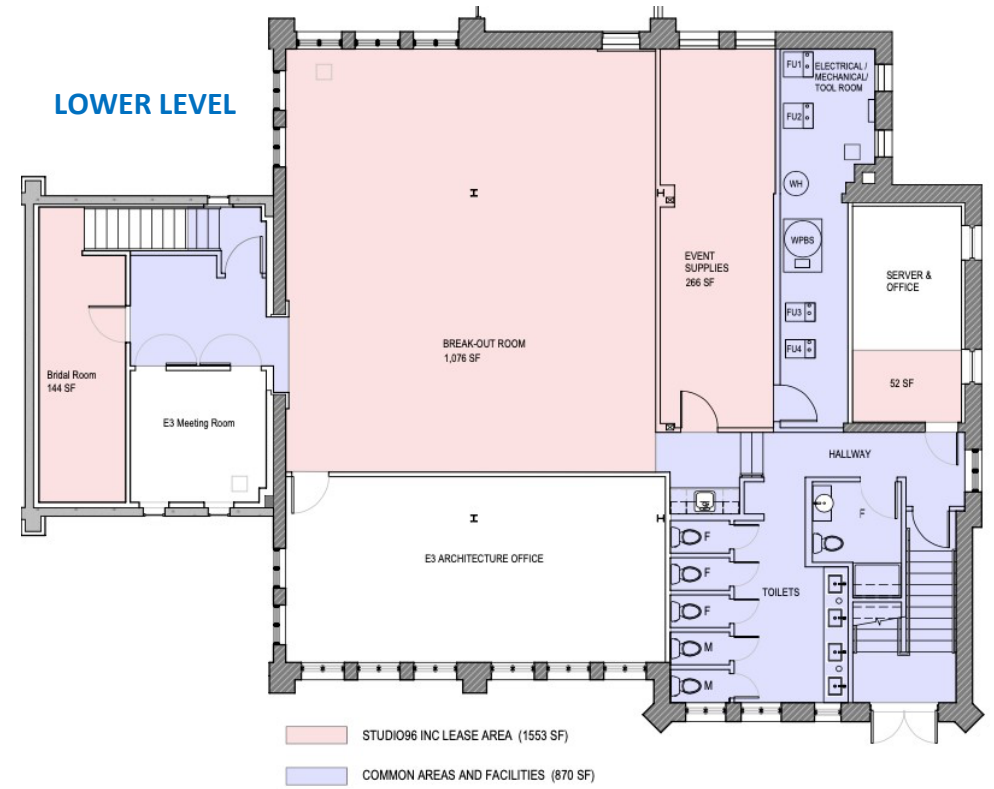

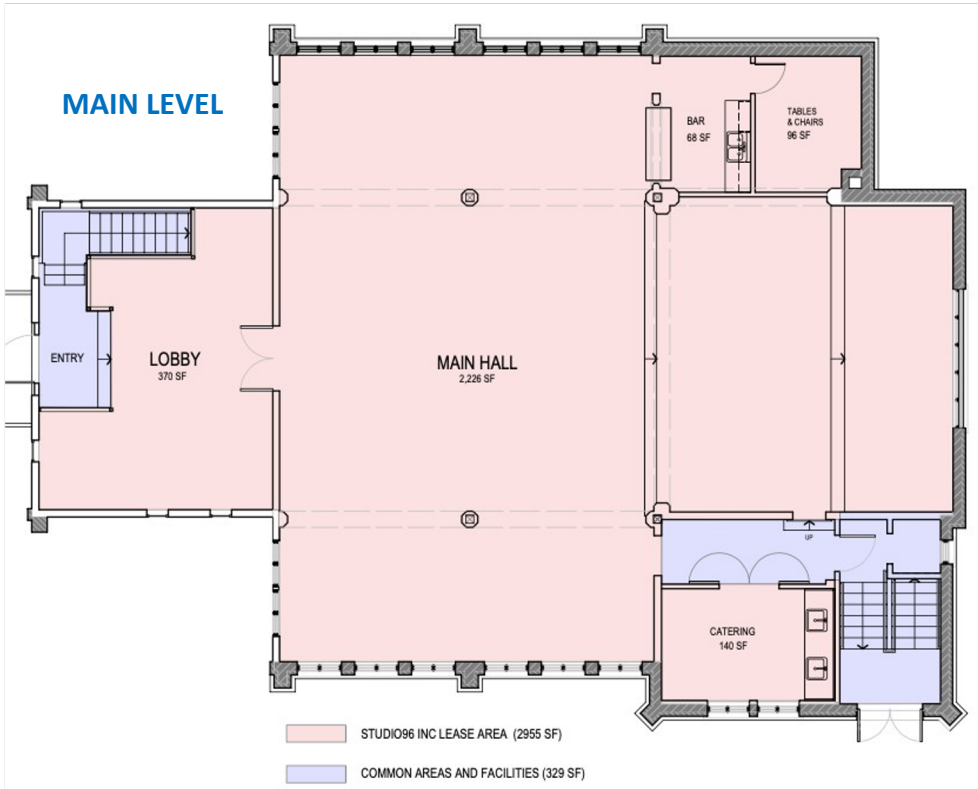

E3 applied their creative flair for design and along with the vision of Studio96 transformed the building structurally, mechanically, and aesthetically.

Today it is a magical and inspiring venue in the heart of Edmonton contributing to the revitalization of the McCauley district.
