GROWTH ON DICKERSON PIKE

New York-based Aria Development Group and Nashville-based Wedgewood Avenue revealed plans for a massive mixed-use development on Dickerson Pike.

The Pike, a master-planned community with over 600 residential units, restaurant, retail and public outdoor space, will transform 12 acres in the heart of the East Nashville neighborhood.

The mixed-use development will feature six buildings, ranging from three to five stories, 26 townhomes, two plex units (such as a duplex or triplex) and a parking garage. Plans also include around 15,000 square feet of retail space.

Located across the street from The Dive Motel and a short drive from Oracle Corp.'s future $1.2 billion campus, the development will add more than 600 residential units to the up-and-coming neighborhood.

Nashville development firm Holladay Ventures is planning a 36-acre mixed-use development on the northern segment of Dickerson Pike.

The development, with a main address of 3539 Dickerson Pike, will offer 450 residential units over two-mixed use buildings, as well as 75 for-sale units — including 18 single-family homes, 12 stacked townhomes and 45 "tree houses." Nearly 26 acres of the property will be reserved for active open space with walking trails, greenways, a park and pavilion structures.

The master-planned community, dubbed "3539 Dickerson Pike Development," will also offer a child care building, playground, amenity building and an outdoor amphitheater.

GROWTH ON DICKERSON PIKE

In spring 2022, local developers announced plans to transform the Piggly Wiggly site at 917 Dickerson Pike into a 13,000-square-foot dining destination.

Only one 3,000-square-foot space remains available, with the rest being leased to notable Nashville restaurateurs, bar owners and retailers. In a few months, the spaces will be handed over to the tenants, Elliott Kyle, one of the developers on the project, told the Business Journal.

James Beard-nominated chef Philip Krajeck, the local restaurateur behind Rolf & Daughters and Folk, is opening Junior Restaurant and Wine Bar in the development, according to the Nashville Post.

Honest to Goodness Hospitality, the group behind Red Headed Stranger and Butcher & Bee, will open Fancypants in early 2024.

Nashville-based homebuilder Legacy South closed on 8.9 acres of land near Dickerson Pike eyed for a residential development.

The company paid $5 million for the land where it plans to combine the parcels and develop them into 91 multifamily units.

The development, dubbed "Taylor" on documents previously submitted to the Metro Planning Department, will consist of 90 three-bedroom townhomes and one three-bedroom carriage home. The development will also feature a pool and community clubhouse.

GROWTH ON DICKERSON PIKE

After decades of land acquisitions, Jenkins Properties is gearing up for a 61-acre mixed-use development along the burgeoning Dickerson Pike corridor in East Nashville.

The project, dubbed Talbot's Corner, will comprise residences, retail and office space, rising across 18 parcels at the corner of Dickerson Pike and West Trinity Lane, near Interstate 24, the Nashville Business Journal reported.

Nashville-based Barge Design Solutions, the architect behind the project, has requested to rezone the land to allow a mix of residential and commercial uses. If approved, the developers would be able to build six-to-15 stories high.
