About Fort McMurray

Fort McMurray is Canada’s “energy engine” and is located in the Regional Municipality of Wood Buffalo. The region plays a significant role in the development of the national petroleum industry. Fort McMurray represents the success story of continuing advances in oil sands extraction technology. The many oil sands mines and servicing companies in and around Fort McMurray provide a tremendous source of income to residents.

Year over year, Alberta’s northern oil sands production breaks new national records and 2025 was no different, a steady 5% increase from the previous year. The region is the 4th largest producer of oil in the world and produces the vast majority of oil within Canada. Oil is Canada’s #1 export, making up over 20% of trade, positioning Fort McMurray as an economic pillar supporting the country.

With an estimated 185 Billion barrels of oil left to be mined, equalling at least another 100 years of activity, Fort McMurray will continue to be a leader in the oil & gas industry for many years to come.
