Arts District

Once the industrial backbone of Downtown Los Angeles, the Arts District has emerged as the city's most culturally magnetic submarket — a neighborhood where heritage warehouses, world-class galleries, and Michelin-recognized restaurants converge along walkable, tree-lined streets. Anchored by destinations like Hauser & Wirth, Soho Warehouse, ROW DTLA, and Bestia, the district has become the chosen address for global creative brands, entertainment studios, fashion houses, and design-forward enterprises seeking proximity to talent, culture, and cachet. Few neighborhoods in Los Angeles offer this rare confluence of architectural character, lifestyle amenity, and creative gravity — and even fewer offer the opportunity to occupy a landmark building within it.
