NEIGHBORHOOD

MADISON

Madison, one of Nashville's fastest-evolving submarkets, is experiencing significant growth and reinvestment as new residential, retail, and mixed-use developments reshape the community. Located just 10 miles from downtown Nashville's Central Business District (CBD), Madison offers the perfect mix of convenience and connectivity.

Positioned along key commercial corridors including Gallatin Pike and Old Hickory Boulevard, its strategic location provides seamless access to Highway 65, Briley Parkway, and other key transit routes, making it a hub for both local residents and travelers.

A major catalyst for the neighborhood's continued transformation is the redevelopment of Madison Square into the The Madison Station, a more than $600 million mixed-use project that will introduce new residential units, retail, dining, entertainment, and public green space. This landmark's investment is expected to further elevate Madison as a destination within Davidson County.

Demographically, Madison attracts a diverse mix of families, young professionals, and long time residents. Its relative affordability compared to other Nashville submarkets, combined with ongoing public and private investment has fueled renewed interest and steady population growth.

With its blend of accessibility, thriving local businesses, and growing amenities, Madison is well-positioned as one of Nashville's most dynamic and desirable communities.
