19 and 21 Dundas Square date from 1913 and 1929, respectively, with 19 Dundas Square being the tallest building in the city upon its completion. It is also one of the earliest examples of cast-in-place concrete structures in the city. The buildings once served as the headquarters of the Imperial Optical Company, and has been completely renovated for new tenancies. The building features fully replaced building systems including HVAC, electrical and plumbing, upgraded and modernized elevators, and refreshed and new common spaces including the heritage designated lobby, and new fully furnished 10th floor patio with Wifi. The ground floor has been activated by a new cafe and ice cream shop and a barber.
