Affectionately known as Cally Road by locals, Caledonian Road's business community is growing with start-ups and established enterprises alike taking occupation in the district, with easy access into central London via the Piccadilly line and Overground network. The quarter's Victorian commercial heritage lends a warehouse aesthetic to the design of fashionable after-work venues like The Depot and The Pleasance, in contrast to the gleaming modernity of Arsenal's Emirates Stadium. Just to the north of Kings Cross spectacular regeneration zone, Cally Yard is the edgy and aspiring younger sibling to smooth-suited Upper Street.
