The Brickstone comprises of a collection of buildings facing Seaton and Colyton St in the Arts District of Downtown Los Angeles. One of the buildings at 440 Seaton, built in 1917, was originally used as an indoor lumberyard and warehouse for a furniture manufacturing company and has just undergone a complete seismic retrofit and remodel to deliver over 50,000 sf of retail and creative office while preserving the eclectic and urban features of the property.

The project is already home to creatives in design, architecture and fashion and has most recently signed a lease with Aire Ancient Baths and Spa, a world recognized high-end spa with locations throughout Europe and North America which will occupy 25,000 sf.

The neighborhood.

The Arts District in Downtown Los Angeles is a vibrant, dynamic neighborhood that seamlessly blends creativity with urban grit. Once an industrial hub, the area has transformed into a hotspot for artists, entrepreneurs, and trendsetters. Its streets are lined with converted warehouses that now house art galleries, cutting-edge design studios, boutique shops, and trendy cafes, creating an industrial-chic aesthetic that celebrates both its past and present. The juxtaposition of raw, exposed brick and modern, sleek interiors gives the Arts District a unique, edgy charm. Street art and murals add bursts of color and creativity to every corner, reflecting the area's dynamic cultural energy. With its fusion of industrial heritage and contemporary innovation, the Arts District is an ever-evolving hub of inspiration and creativity.

Built in 1913, using brick, steel, redwood and concrete. 440 Seaton was originally used as an indoor lumberyard and warehouse for a furniture manufacturing company and has just undergone a complete seismic retrofit and remodel to create over 57,000 sf of retail and creative office while preserving the eclectic and urban features of the property

421 - 431 Colyton St.

Built in 1909, 421 Colyton Street began as a brick warehouse originally housing woodworking firms and later playing a key role in aviation history with the 1921 construction of the pioneering Douglas Cloudster airplane. Over a century later, the building has been fully revitalized into a 31,000-square-foot creative hub with modern upgrades, exposed brick interiors, and high ceilings. Now home to creative business. Its historic charm and adaptive reuse make it a standout property in the Arts District.

LOCATION

Area Highlights

- Located in the center of the vibrant Art's District Downtown LA
- Surrounded by several restaurants, retailer, galleries, etc..
- Dense area
- Easy access to 101, 110, 5 and 1 freeways

Equal parts warehouse waste land and burgeoning hub for LA's young, professional and creative, the Arts District is the city's neighborhood to watch. And with approximate limits of Second Street to Seventh Street and Alameda Street and the LA River, surprisingly, the Southeast section of Downtown is totally walkable, sprinkled amidst these perimeters are the makings of a community rich in character, featuring stylish galleries, handsome coffee shops, socially conscious boutiques and some of the best restaurants and bars. These pockets of budding establishments lie amidst a stretch of early 20th-century warehouses—many ex-factories some of which are deserted, but all of which hold the promise of artist studios and loft apartments with exposed brick walls and floor-to-ceiling windows. Prominent galleries such as Hauser & Wirth and Corey Helford Art Gallery, and spots like Death and Co., Urth Caffè, Wurstkuche, Umami Burger, and the Arts District Brewery have not only become local favorites but popular attractions for visitors and tourists. Today, along with the great eateries and galleries, renown retailers are positioning themselves to open flagship stores on East 3rd Street such as Le Labo, 3.1Phillip Lim and Shinola.
