Retail Promenade | Denver Design District | 575 S. Broadway

The retail promenade at 575 S. Broadway will be the artery of the District.

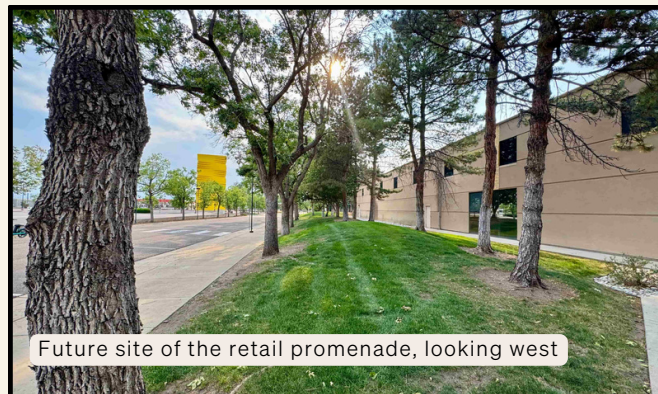

Running along the southern face of the building on Center Avenue, the promenade will serve as the connective hub between legacy showrooms and a new generation of lifestyle and experiential tenants.

The promenade sits within a landscape of mature trees and native plantings, with retail storefronts, seating, and fluid indoor-outdoor connections along its length.

A comprehensive signage and wayfinding plan carries tenant branding from the first turn at Center Avenue, throughout the promenade, and into the interior common areas.

Retail Storefronts | Denver Design District | 575 S. Broadway

Twenty-four-foot ceilings and expansive windows along the retail promenade create light-filled interiors with the visibility and scale to accommodate a wide range of concepts.

Retail and flex spaces can be combined, reduced, or reconfigured for destination retail, galleries, public-facing showrooms, experiential concepts, and select food and beverage uses.

The building is being repositioned at a stage that allows ownership to respond to tenant-specific operational, architectural, and storefront requirements, with opportunities to incorporate qualifying tenant needs before delivery.

Space uses, demising walls, USF, and LSF are subject to change. Spaces may be combined or reconfigured to accommodate tenant requirements. Contact broker to discuss tenant fit, test fits, and timing.

Discover the New Era of the Denver Design District

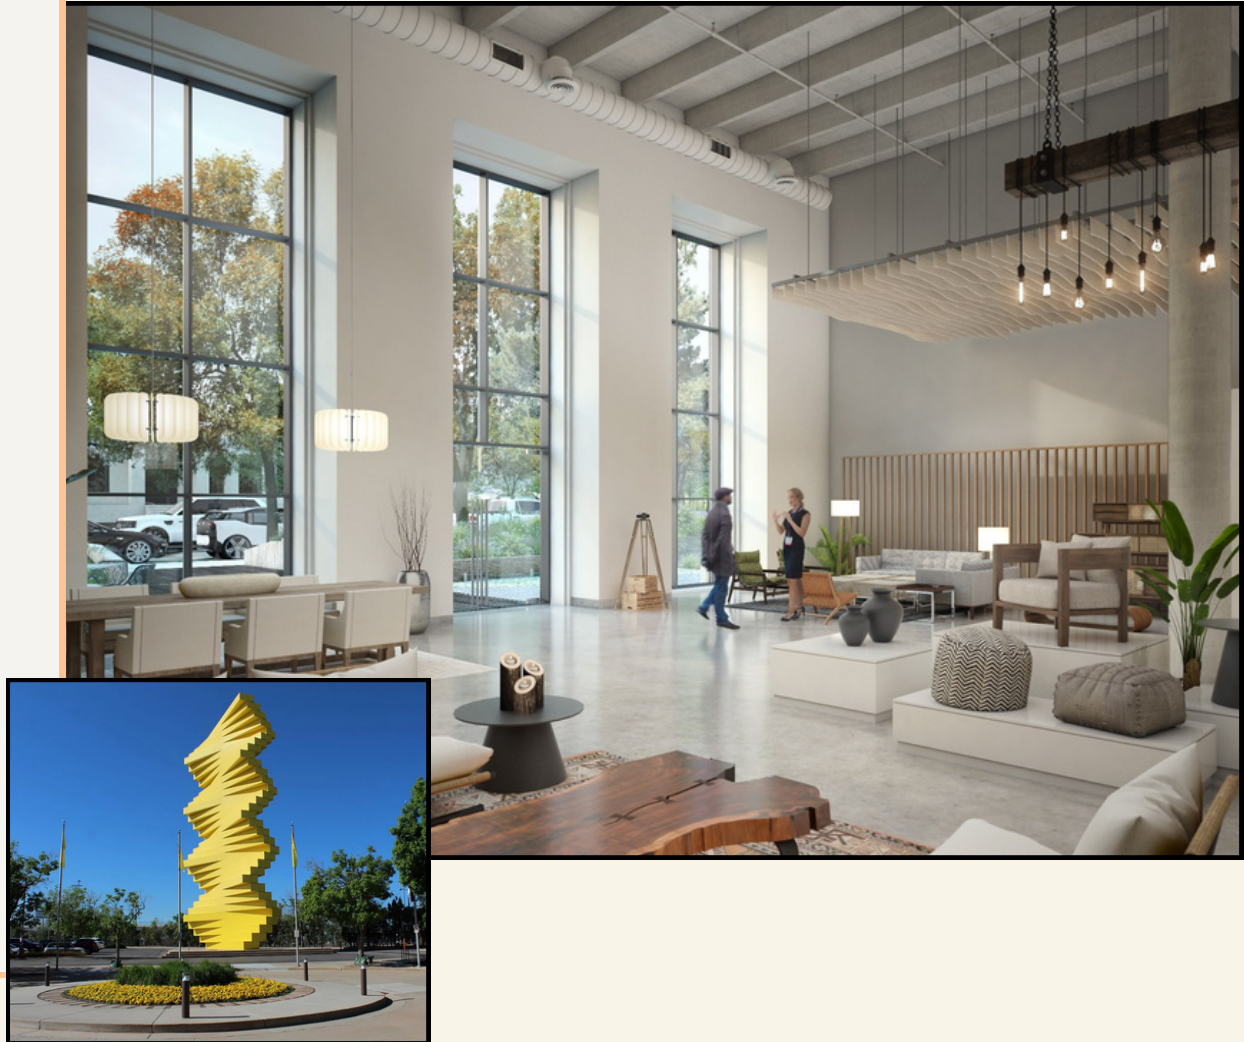

Turn off Broadway onto Center Avenue, and the city falls away. Mature trees line the approach. The Articulated Wall sculpture acts as a beacon, instantly recognizable to anyone who knows Denver.

This is the Denver Design District. Two miles south of downtown, at the convergence of I-25 and Broadway, it is home to the largest concentration of design showrooms in the Rocky Mountain West.

The district is entering a new era, one that opens its doors to the public.

The new activation of 545 and 575 S. Broadway adds retail, food, and wellness concepts, cementing the District's status as a cultural destination without diluting the showroom anchors that built its reputation.

Meet the tenants shaping the next chapter of the Denver Design District.

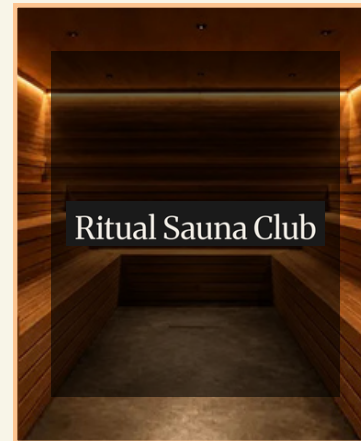

A Tavola will anchor the southeast corner of 575 S Broadway as an all-day café, market, and wine shop. The concept pairs light fare from breakfast through dinner with a selection of more than 300 bottles.

Fascination St. Fine Art spent 30 years in Cherry Creek North before moving to the district in 2026. The move put the gallery ten minutes from its original home, with improved access and free parking just outside its doors.

Mother Other, the brick-and-mortar restaurant from the team behind The Easy Vegan, has been a favorite of the press and the public since opening in June 2026. The restaurant serves seasonal vegan fare and cocktails at 675 S Broadway, Suite 300. Read more from Denver Westword.

Rebel Bread opened its doors at the DDD in 2020 as a wholesale bakery serving businesses across the metro. In 2025, it opened a café and baking school alongside its wholesale kitchen, proof of the incubator energy the district offers its tenants. Find them at 675 S Broadway, Suite 600, and read more from Denver7.

Ritual Sauna Club is set to join the retail lineup along Broadway at 545 S Broadway with a social sauna and cold plunge wellness center. Founding memberships are live now at a discounted rate, and you can sign up for the waitlist to stay updated on the launch.

The district's expansion is no secret. National design industry trade press and local Denver media have already picked up the story, bringing new attention to the district and the businesses within it.

Audience is Everything | Denver Design District

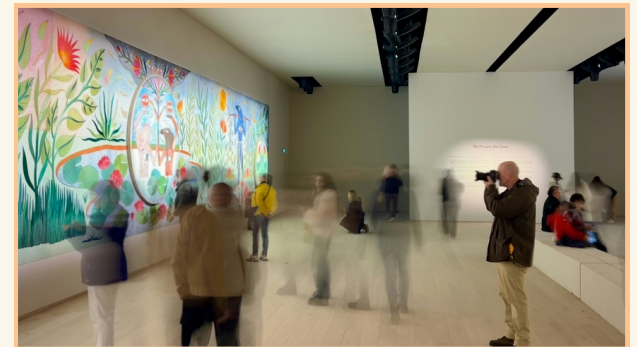

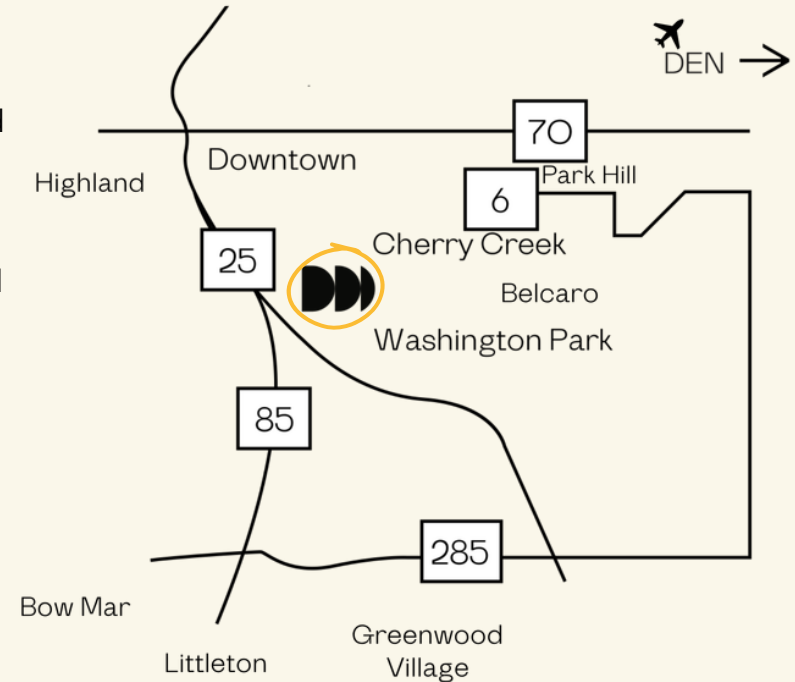

The Denver Design District already serves an audience accustomed to bespoke design. Designers, architects, luxury homeowners, and their clients use the District to source custom homes throughout Denver and the Rocky Mountain resort markets, including Aspen and Vail.

These are consumers who value craftsmanship, personalization, and exceptional design. As the District expands into art, dining, wellness, and experiential retail, that established audience is joined by design-conscious Denver consumers drawn to the same qualities.

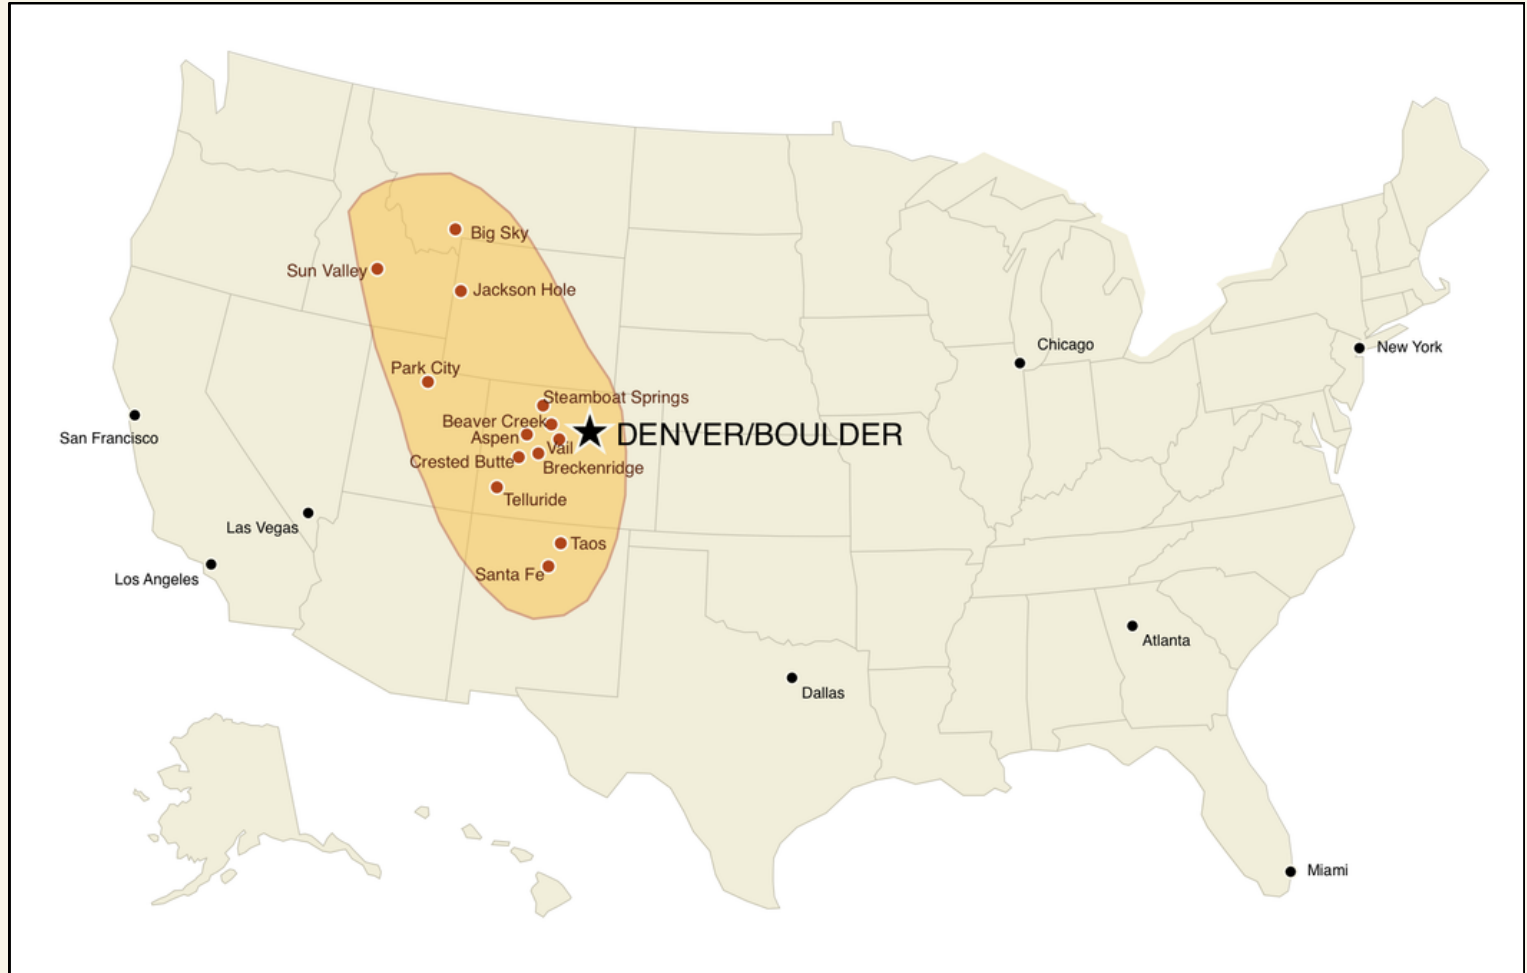

The District's central location also places it within easy reach of many of Denver's most established residential neighborhoods, including Cherry Creek, Country Club, Polo Club, Hilltop, Bonnie Brae/Belcaro, Cherry Hills Village, Greenwood Village, and Bow Mar.

The result is an audience that comes to the District not only to specify and source, but increasingly to dine, shop, experience, and return.

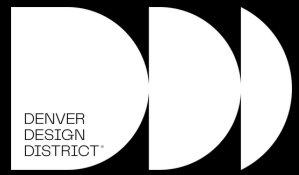

The Denver Design District serves a 1,000-mile corridor from Big Sky, Montana, to Santa Fe, New Mexico, encompassing many of North America's most significant resort and second-home markets.

The co-location of showrooms and design resources makes the District a regional hub for designers, architects, and their clients throughout the Rocky Mountain West.

575 S. Broadway in Context | Denver Design District

The Denver Design District spans five buildings organized along Center Avenue, with Broadway forming its eastern edge.

545 S. Broadway sits directly on Broadway at the District's gateway. 575 S. Broadway sits one parcel west, with long frontage along Center Avenue and immediate access to the District's central parking and pedestrian network.

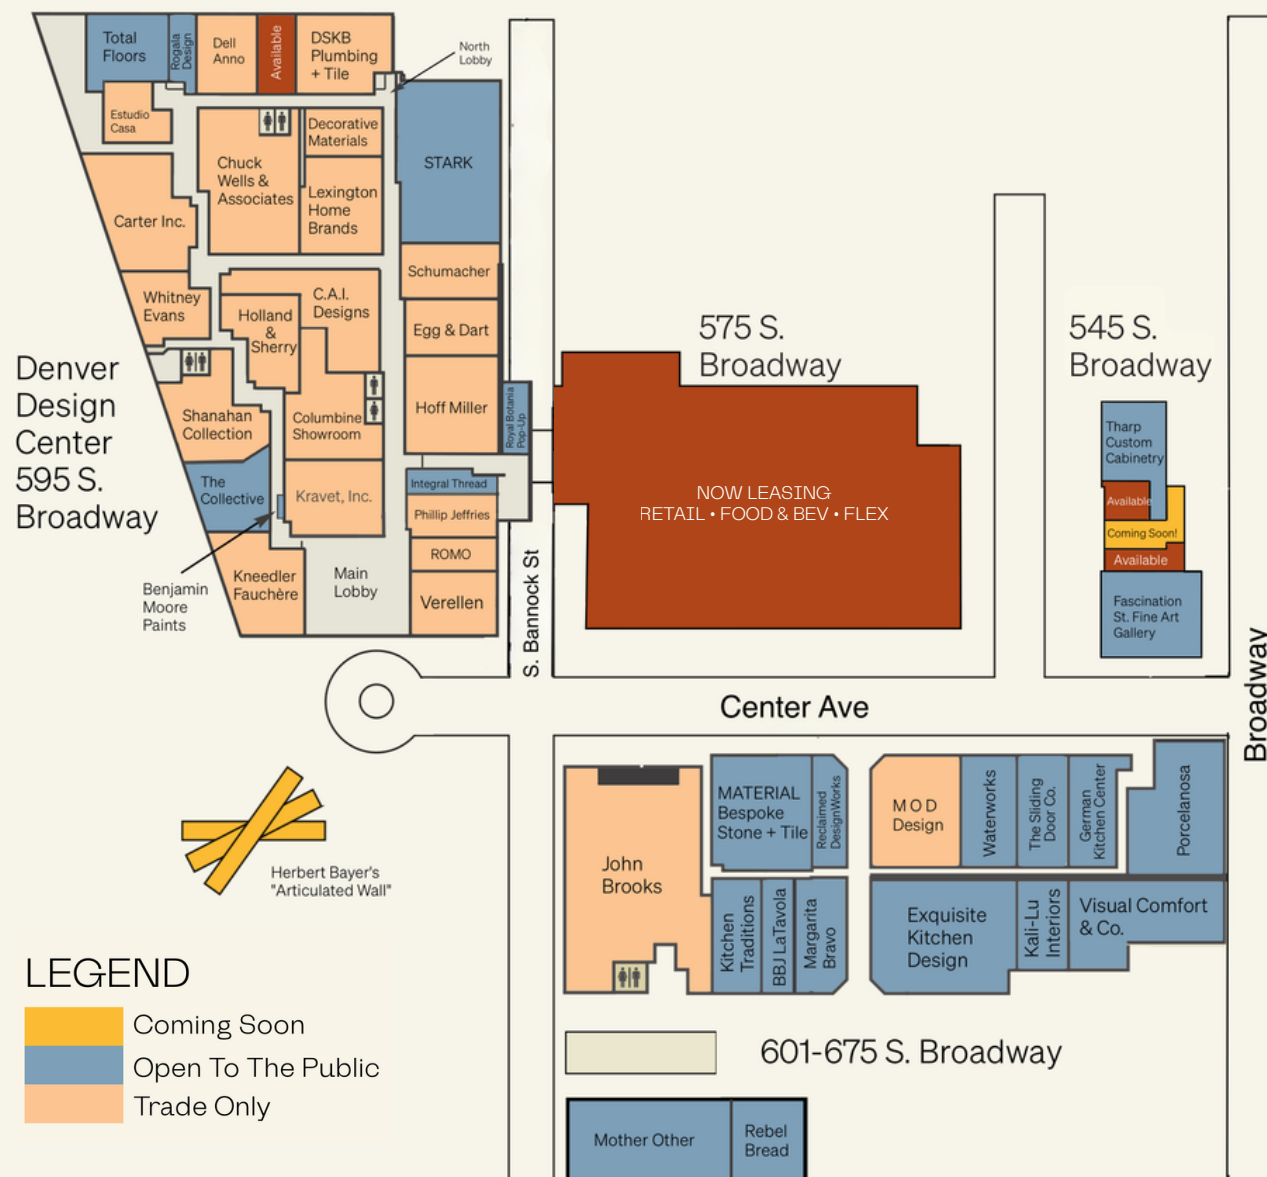

Together, 545 and 575 are reshaping the eastern side of the District, connecting the established showroom campus with new public-facing retail, dining, gallery, and wellness uses.

Multiple parking areas are distributed throughout the campus, giving 575 tenants access to convenient parking options for customers, employees, and events.

545 S. Broadway is also available for lease. Contact broker for details.

Design District Ecosystem | Site Plan & Tenant Mix

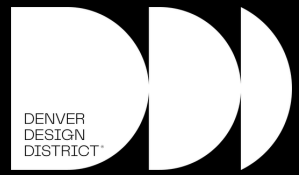

The Denver Design District brings together an established concentration of high-end furnishing, material, kitchen, bath, textile, and design showrooms within a single campus.

At the eastern edge, 545 and 575 S. Broadway are expanding that ecosystem with a new generation of public-facing retail, dining, gallery, and wellness concepts.

Tenants at 575 benefit from proximity to both audiences: the designers and clients who have long used the District as a regional sourcing destination, and the growing consumer audience drawn to its evolving mix of experiences.
