SOUTH BROADWAY

SOUTH BROADWAY HISTORY

South Broadway in Denver is a vibrant blend of history and modernity. Originating as a fruit transport path in the 1870s, it evolved with horse-drawn trolleys, cable cars, and electrified trolley lines, becoming a vital artery by 1898. Once home to Henry Ford’s Model T Truck plant, it now boasts a lively mix of taverns, vintage shops, eateries, art galleries, and music venues, particularly in the Baker neighborhood. Known for “Antique Row” with nearly 100 antique stores, it also offers diverse dining options and entertainment like Punch Bowl Social, the Gothic Theatre, and Levitt Pavilion Denver. With craft breweries, unique shops, and annual events like the Underground Music Showcase, South Broadway remains a dynamic cultural hub reflecting Denver’s past and future
