ABOUT THE AREA

ANDERSON, SC

Anderson is located in the northwestern part of South Carolina, in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains. Known as the "Electric City" because it was one of the first cities in the Southeast to have electricity, thanks to a pioneering hydroelectric plant in the late 1800s.

As of the 2020 Census, the city had a population of around 28,000, while the surrounding Anderson County has about 203,000 people.

Key industries now include manufacturing, automotive suppliers, and healthcare. It is part of the Upstate SC region, which has attracted significant foreign investment, especially from German and Japanese companies

Home to Anderson University, a private Christian university with around 4,000 students. Nearby major universities include Clemson University (about 15 miles away).

Local Attractions Include:

- Lake Hartwell - A large man-made lake popular for boating, fishing, and camping.
- Downtown Anderson- Known for its historic buildings, shops, restaurants, and community events.
- Anderson Sports and Entertainment Center - Includes a civic center, amphitheater, and recreational facilities.

Part of the Greenville-Anderson-Mauldin Metropolitan Area, one of the fastest-growing regions in the Southeast. Has a rich history dating back to the early 1800s, with a downtown area featuring many 19th- and early 20th-century buildings.
