POPULATION IN BERKELEY COUNTY

Berkeley County continues to be one of West Virginia’s fastest-growing economic regions, supported by strong population growth, workforce expansion, and continued private-sector investment throughout the Eastern Panhandle.

Population growth throughout Berkeley County continues to outpace much of the state, reinforcing long-term demand for commercial, industrial, retail, healthcare, and residential development. Between 2023 and 2024 alone, Berkeley County added approximately 3,400 new residents, representing a 2.6% annual population increase.

The Eastern Panhandle’s economic momentum has been fueled by sustained growth in manufacturing, logistics, distribution, professional services, and commuter-based employment tied to the greater Washington D.C. metropolitan economy. Ongoing infrastructure investment, industrial expansion, and new business formation continue to strengthen Berkeley County’s position as one of the premier business and development destinations in West Virginia.
