Location Overview

Fall River, WI

Fall River is a village in Columbia County in the U.S. state of Wisconsin. The population was 1,801 at the 2020 census.

DOLLAR GENERAL

Before the settlers came to our area, when south-central Wisconsin was still wilderness and large areas of unsettled wild territory, two small creeks flowed together to form the Crawfish River. It was on a high ridge above the Crawfish River that A.A. Brayton first built his house and store in 1845.

That same year Brayton constructed a mud-log-and brush dam across the Crawfish. The dam has been rebuilt, repaired and rehabilitated several times since 1845 and is currently used to control water flow and level of a small lake behind it, known as Lazy Lake.
