Location & Market

05 · LOCATION & MARKET

The southern edge of the Augusta metro.

Hephzibah is a growing Richmond County community on the southern edge of the Augusta metropolitan area — one of Georgia's larger metros, with a uniquely diversified economic base.

The market is anchored by Fort Eisenhower (formerly Fort Gordon), a major U.S. Army installation, alongside Augusta University Medical Center, a robust healthcare and education sector, and a growing cybersecurity and technology corridor. These drivers create a stable, multi-layered employment base that sustains consistent population growth and household formation.

Housing costs remain well below national averages, supporting strong demand for affordable workforce housing and generating durable long-term rental demand — including a deep tenant base supported by Section 8 and other assistance programs.

BOTTOM LINE

"Diversified metro employment, below-average housing costs, and a durable, executable lease-up strategy backed by Section 8 depth."
