An aerial photograph showing the Chamlian Building, a large, historic brick structure with a flat roof, situated at the corner of P Street and Cesar Chavez Boulevard. The building is surrounded by parking lots, trees, and other urban buildings. In the background, a cityscape with various buildings and green spaces is visible under a clear blue sky.

A TESTAMENT TO TIME

The Chamlian Building, formerly known as the Berven Rug Mills, Inc. and later the Wellman-Peck & Company Building, is a significant historical structure located at the corner of P Street and Cesar Chavez Boulevard. It reflects the commercial development of the early 20th century and stands as a testament to timeless architecture that endures.

ARCHITECTURAL STYLE

This building embodies the hallmark features of early 20th-century industrial architecture. Its design showcases sturdy brick masonry, open ceiling trusses that expose the structural framework, and exposed wooden support posts—all contributing to its authentic industrial character. Large multi-pane windows allow natural light to flood the interior, enhancing both functionality and atmosphere. The overall aesthetic reflects a distinctly utilitarian approach, prioritizing durability, practicality, and the efficient use of space.
