About the Neighborhood: Cobbs Creek

Cobbs Creek is a well-located West Philadelphia neighborhood benefiting from strong transit connectivity, proximity to major institutional employers, and access to one of the city's largest park systems. The area is anchored by Cobbs Creek Park, which offers extensive green space, recreational amenities, and the historic Cobbs Creek Golf Course, enhancing overall neighborhood appeal.

The property is located near University City, including the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania (HUP) and the broader Penn Medicine and University of Pennsylvania campuses—one of the region's largest and most stable employment centers. This proximity supports consistent residential demand from healthcare and university-related users.

Public transportation access is a key attribute, with the nearby 60th Street Station serving as a major SEPTA transit hub providing trolley, subway, and bus service with direct connections to Center City, University City, and Philadelphia International Airport.

The neighborhood continues to benefit from ongoing public and private investment, infrastructure improvements, and expanding institutional influence from adjacent sub-markets. As development activity progresses westward from University City, Cobbs Creek remains well positioned for long-term growth while maintaining strong community character and accessibility.
