Flagstaff's first integrated multi-tenant medical office campus

Join Flagstaff's most innovative healthcare community

Nestled at 7,000 feet above sea level at the base of the San Francisco Peaks, Flagstaff is one of the highest cities in the nation. Flagstaff is approximately 90 minutes from the Grand Canyon and less than three hours away from Phoenix. The elevation allows for much cooler temperatures Flagstaff's neighboring desert cities as well as winter activities such as skiing and snowboarding. The area also features a number of hiking and biking trails through and around the mountainous area.

The county population consists of nearly 142,000 individuals or 47,000 households. Education and health services is the third largest sector in the local economy totaling 9,800 workers.

Northern Arizona University is the primary economic engine in Flagstaff, with a total enrollment at the Flagstaff campus of more than 27,000 students. Because of the large population of students and recent graduates, the homeownership rate in Flagstaff is just 44 percent.
