LOCAL INFORMATION

Crest Hill, Illinois, sits in the heart of the Chicago southwest logistics corridor, one of the most important distribution hubs in the United States. The city is nestled between Interstates 55, 80 and 355, and is proximate to massive intermodal hubs in Joliet/Elwood (BNSF & Union Pacific). This allows for one-to-two-day truck and transit reach to most of the United States population.

Crest Hill is a distribution-first location that benefits directly from the Joliet logistics cluster, specifically the CenterPoint Intermodal Center (Joliet/Elwood). This creates a high volume of container traffic, which equals constant demand for warehousing, transloading, last-mile delivery and more. Companies choose the city when they want intermodal access without paying premium rents closer to Chicago. Unlike land-constrained submarkets, Crest Hill still offers room to build with a generally pro-development local government. This leads to faster approvals and fewer entitlement headaches than urban infill.
